The Orphanage Industry in Uganda

Wednesday, May 7

5:00 p.m.

1010 Medical Sciences Center
1300 University Avenue

In 2011, Keren Riley established Reunite, a program that helps resettle children who have been trafficked and/or lost in the orphanage system.

Reunite helps return children to their birth families. Reunite also educates and provides counseling to the family, strengthens the family through economic improvement programs and manages the resettlement and ongoing monitoring of the placements.

Riley uses photography, film and social media to document Reunite cases as a way of advocating and educating both local and international communities to the damage of long-term institutional care and corruption and trafficking involved in international adoption.

See Riley's blog at rileysinuganda.blogspot.com to learn more.
